3D floor plans, elevations and dimensions are shown and to the extent of the developer's knowledge and belief, the developer is not aware of any other information that would be determined by using the description and definition of the "3D" set forth in the Declaration (which generally only includes the interior dimensions between the perimeter walls and exclusive of interior structural components and other construction elements). This method is generally used to create a perspective view of the building with walls in other construction projects that utilize the same method. Measurements of rooms set forth on this floor plan are generally taken at the farthest points of each room, without regard for any columns or variations. Accordingly, the area of the actual room will typically be smaller than the area shown on this floor plan.
